

Figure 7-29 Structure of a typical prokaryotic mRNA molecule. Unlike eucaryotic ribosomes, which recognize a 5' cap, procaryotic ribosomes initiate transcription at ribosome-binding sites, which can be located in the interior of an mRNA molecule. This feature permits procaryotes to synthesize more than one type of protein from a single mRNA species.